Bhopal India

Surviving victims of the poison gas leak in Bhopal, India, hold their eyes in pain. The gas could cause blindness. Doctors say 20,000 victims may suffer serious aftereffects, including sterility.

The poison gas leak from a pesticide plant has killed 1,000 people, doctors said yesterday, and many of the survivors in this central Indian city are threatened by blindness and sterility.

The doctors said many of the dead were children and the elderly, who were not strong enough to withstand - or outrun - the lethal cloud that spread over 25 square miles of this city of 900,000 on Monday.

The methyl isocyanate gas had begun leaking at 1 a.m. from an underground storage tank at a Union Carbide pesticide plant in a poor area of Bhopal. The leak was stopped after 40 minutes, but the gas seeped silently over the city through the early hours of the morning.

Police on Monday arrested five plant officials on negligence charges and sealed off the factory. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, who toured the city yesterday said the factory would never reopen.

Police teams searched house to house, stepping over the carcasses of water buffalo, dogs and birds that dropped in the streets when the poison overcame them. The police often had to break down doors bolted from the inside by frantic victims in a vain attempt to keep out the gas.

Bimla Devi, 37, who lost her husband and their only child, said the acrid gas sent thousands of people scattering in panic. She said most of those who fell, coughing and crying, were old people and children.

Volunteers helped cremate 228 Hindus on blazing outdoor pyres that flickered bright orange against the dark sky last night. Other volunteers helped dig graves to bury Moslems 11 at a time in common 15-foot-long graves.

Doctors said the gas makes the lungs produce so much fluid that victims drown, sometimes days after the exposure.

Drs. Parveen Chaudhary and S.K. Srivastava of Hamedia Hospital told the Associated Press they counted 500 corpses at the city's major hospitals and had reports of at least 500 more dead at hospitals on Bhopal's outskirts. The United News of India news agency said there were at least 1,200 dead.

Doctors said the gas affected as many as 200,000 people, and Chaudhary said 20,000 may suffer, serious aftereffects. He said some may lose their eyesight, and some women may not be able to bear children.

The gas slowly dissipated into the atmosphere through the day, but air samples yesterday still showed traces of poison in the air.

Bishop Tutu Calls Reagan Administation Immoral And Un-christian

Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond M. Tutu accused the Reagan administration today of "immoral, evil and totally un-Christian" collaboration with South African apartheid, despite an administration claim that critics of its policy are spouting rubbish.

The Black Anglican bishop-disignate of Johannesburg, who will receive the Nobel Peace Prize in Oslo, Norway, next week, was accorded a highly unusual standing ovation by members of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Africa and members of the audience after his testimony at a public hearing.

He offered to meet with President Reagan or Secretary of State George P. Shultz, if they will invite him, to outline his objections to the administration's policy of "constructive engagement."

Sen. Carl Levin (D-Mich.), who joined House members at the hearing, said he would ask other senators to join him in a letter urging Reagan to extend such an invitation.

Tutu told the lawmakers that the administration's policy "has encouraged the white racist regime (of South Africa) into escalated in transigence and oppression."

"We are talking about a moral issue," he said. Denouncing apartheid as "evil, immoral and un-Christian," he added, "The Reagan administration's...collaboration with it is equally immoral, evil and totally un-Christian."

Rep. Gerald Solomon (R-N.Y.), a supporter of the administration's policy, told the bishop, "I hope you were not saying that I am evil and Un-Christian or that the president is.

Tutu replied that he was speaking of the policies, not the people, and Solomon thanked him for the explanation.

The administration made its view known on Monday, shortly before three more people were arrested outside the South African Embassy. The arrests brought to 19 the number of people who have been detained in protests there.

Four people were arrested Monday in a similar protest outside South African consulate in New York City, and more than 30 members of Black Students Union picketed outside the consulate in Beverly Hills, Calif.

In a related developmeent, a top aide to Jesse Jackson said Monday night that South African authorities were reconsidering the civil right leader's application for a visa.

Reagan Praises Election Victory.

President Reagan and his administration praised the election victory in Grenada of pro-U.S. political leader Herbert Blaize as putting the small Caribbean island "firmly back on the democratic path" after nearly four years under a pro-Marxist government.

"Congratulations are due to the people of Grenada," said Reagan when welcoming President Jaime Lusinchi of Venezuela, Grenada's nearest and largest southern neighbor.

New Research Seeks To Prevent Child Abuse.

By combining parenting classes with support from volunteer parent aides, a new research project at Harborview Medical Center is attempting to prevent child abuse and neglect in a pilot group of Seattle mothers and infants

"Parents who are young, poor, and usually single, are at highest risk for abusing oor neglecting their children," says Bonnie Sandahl, M.N., director of patient education in HMC's Pediatrics Department and director of the new parenting project.

"We're not looking for professional counselors to be parent aides," Bergman stresses. "We need individuals willing to spend some time sharing the interests, joys, and frustrations of parenting with participating mothers."

The project is funded in part by the Washington State Council on Child Abuse and Neglect. For infomation, call 223-3207. or Cynthia Tayor, at 223-3041.

Veteran Checks Go Up 3.2 Percent.

A 3.2 percent increase in Veterans Adminstration compensation checks to service disabled veterans and dependents beginning in January is one of numerous improvements in veterans benefits announced today by VA Administrator Harry N. Walters.

The increase in disability compensation and other benefits is the result of the Veterans' Benefits Improvements Act of 1984 signed into law by President Reagan.

The rate boost means an increase from $1,255 to $1,295 per month for a veteran with a disability rated at 100 percent. Veterans with a 50 percent disability will receive $376 a month, up from $364, and those with 10 percent ratings will get $66 a month, up from $64.

The legislation also increases to $349 the annual allowance made to certain veterans whose artificial limbs or wheelchairs cause wear on their clothing.

HAVE YOU BELIEVE OUR REPORT?

SERIES #47

ISAIAH 53: 1&2

Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a root out of dry ground.

He hath no form nor comiliness: and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

ST. LUKE 2: 20

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.

And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.)

And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

And Joseph also went from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:)

To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manager; because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there wee in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising god, and saying, glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

Christmas Holiday Safety Tips

December 3, 1984 -- In an attempt to help reduce injuries and accidents to children during Christmas, the Washington State Medical Association has developed a list of ten "toy safety" tips for parents. The guidelines should help reduce the risk of avoidable accidents to youngsters during the holidays, says WSMA President Dr. JOhn M. Kennelly, Jr.

WSMA CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY PSA TOY SAFETY TIPS.

1. Choose a toy that is appropriate for the child's age and development. A crib mobile is not appropriate for a toddler, nor a trike for an infant.

2. Keep in mind that toys intended for an older brother or sister may fall into the hands of a younger brother or sister.

3. Avoid toys for any age group that have detachable parts which could become lodged in the windpipe, ears, or nostrils.

4. Don't buy toys made with glass or brittle plastics which could crack or break into jagged pieces easily.

5. Broken toys are hazardous and should be discarded swiftly. The arms and of stuffed animals and dolls are often manufactured with sharp metal, proving a hazard when exposed.

6. Material labels should be checked for "non-flammable" "flame retardant", or "flame resistant" notices.

Avoid toys that produce excessive noise. Ear damage can be caused by seemingly normal noise levels, if discharged close to a child's ear.

8. When buying electrical toys, always look for the UL (Underwriters Laboratories) seal. This indicates the electrical components of the toy have been inspected for safety.

A Decalogue In Affirmations.

"Again, a new commandment I write unto you, which is true in him and in you: Because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth." I John 2:8

I. Thou shalt enjoy this lovely world which God has made: sun, moon, and stars; fields, flowers, and trees; wind, warmth, and rain; earth, sea sky.

II. Thou shalt enjoy the gift of love from parents, sweethearts, wife, the love which goes on loving when you are most unlovely.

III. Thou shalt enjoy home where you do not visit but belong, where your absence means a gap which no one else can fill.

IV. Thou shalt enjoy the trustfulness of little childre and their adoring belief that there is nothing you do not know and nothing you cannot do.

V. Thou shalt enjoy friends, their loyalty and fellowship, their constancy in sorrow, and their unprotesting acceptance of your timely help.

VI. Thou shalt enjoy wholesome laughter, and ludicrous incident, and the sidesplitting joke.

VII. Thou shalt enjoy art, music, the cinema, literature, eloquence, animals, singing, rhythm, games.

VIII. Thou shalt enjoy the priviledge of helping others: The poor and sick, the aged and mained.

IX. Thou shalt enjoy peace. This peace shall not attach only to your circumstances; it shall abide in your heart.

X. Thou shalt enjoy God: the knowledge that He is there, that He is love, and that He cares for all.

Why not give yourself a present of these affirmations for Christmas? If you do, you'll have a merry, merry.

9. Explain to the child how to use toys properly and safely.

There is no substitute for adult supervision. Any toy, if misused, can be dangerous. Know what toys your children play with and how they play with them.

IS SKIN COLOR A PROBLEM IN AMERICA?

FAST-MOVING headling events, including divorce petitions, adoption cases and a heated debate over the color or lack of color of Black beauty contestants, have brought to the surface long-simmering issues about the continuing relevance of skin color in Black America.

To the surprise of some auditors, who believed the question had been laid to rest in the "Black is Beautiful" days of the 60's, newspapers and magazines have been deluged with letters to the editor, and a number of groups have circulated petitions on both sides of the issue. As if things weren't complicated enough, there have been counter-charges from light-skinned Blacks who say they have been discriminated against because they were too light.

It is obvious from all this that skin color is still a sensitive, emotional and divisive issue in the Black community. No less obvious is the urgent need, emphasized by psychiatrists and sociologists interviewed for this article, for Black Americans to bring the issue out into the open and deal with it honestly.

The roots of the problem, according to these experts, are the intolerable psychological pressures of a racist society which bombard Black Americans with media messages that suggest, day in and day out, that to be beautiful is to be fair-skinned and blue-eyed with long, straight har. More ominously, the society offers tangible rewards to Blacks who meet White society's idea of what a Black ought to be. Black America was again reminded of this dynamic when fair-skinned, greeneyed Vanessa Williams was chosen as the first Black woman to win the "Miss America" title. Causing even more furor among critics was the fact that her successor, Suzette Charles, was also fair-skinned.

What all this means, noted harvard University psychiatrist Alvin Poussaint says, is that skin color is still a problem in Black America because racism is still a problem in White America. "In a racist caste system," he says, "the blacker you are, the more you are demeaned. Within the Black community, there has been a caste system, with the lighter-skinned Blacks having more status, more prestige and being more acceptable to White people. This is still true today, though to a lesser extent."

By way of illustration, we can cite the case of Lesley Crosson, who grew up in New York City with a keen awareness of the importance of skin color. When she was about 10, she overheard her father tell an uncle, "Lesley will have to go to school so she'll be able to take care of herself because dark girls like her have a hard time finding a husband."

Lesley, the darkest child in a family where skin hues include very fair shades, did indeed go to college and is able to take care of herself rather well as editorial director for WCBS-TV in New York, a few years ago, she also married physician Rodger Fraser, though she admits, with a chuckle, that her fairer-skinned sister married at a much younger age.

Given these and other perceptions and problems, it is scarcely surprising that some Blacks succumb to societal pressure and judge themselves and others by the external standards of White America. What is surprising, and worthy of long thought, is that so many Blacks have maintained a sense of self-esteem and balance in the face of the cruel and violent conditioning of more than 400 years of American history.

At the very beginning of that history, many fair-skinned Blacks were created by large-scale mingling and the marriage of Blacks and Whites. Contrary to the generally accepted view, many of these fair-skinned Blacks were the products of the unions of Black males and White females. With the rise of the plantation system and the institutionalization of racism, the focus shifted to the White planters and their allies who played a major - and violent - role in increasing the number of fair-skinned Blacks. In succeeding years, the number of mixed Blacks increased no only because of additional Black-White unions but also because of the union of mixed Blacks an unmixed Blacks and Blacks and Indians. The grand outcome was a thoroughtly mixed Black population. By 1930, according to one authoritative study, 70 to 80 percent of Black Americans had White or Indian ancestors.

SHALAMAR: A good LP from a band destined to do better.

Shalamar: Heart Break (Solar, record or cassette, $8.98) — Of all the funky black rock groups poised to profit from Prince's purple coattails, Shalamar seems the most likely to succeed. Two-thirds of Shalamar has been replaced since last year's The Look, and the fact that one can scarcely tell the difference emphasizes that mellifluous singer/songwriter Howard Hewett is the raison d'etre of this group. Nonetheless, the changes have meant that Heart Break doesn't build on the last LP as much as further define its primary styles: rich ballads (the title tune and Melody) and swirling pop-funk (Amnesia and Deceiver). Add Shalamar's hit off the Footloose sound track — Dancing in the Sheets — and you have a good album from a band destined to do better.

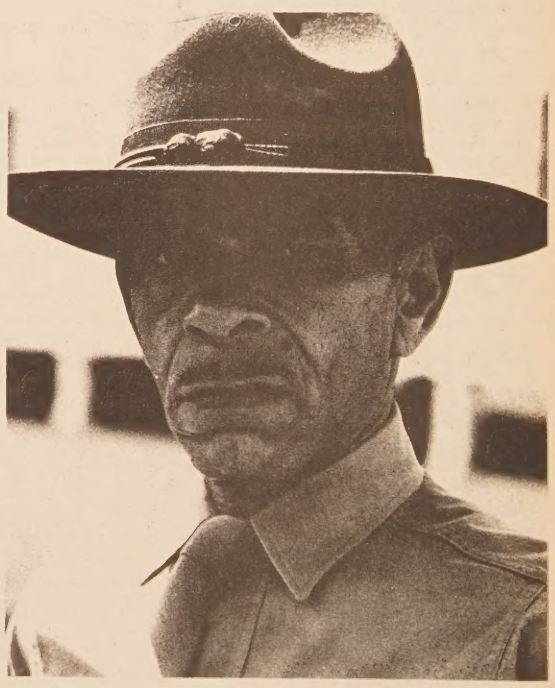
Veteran Actor Wins Critical Acclaim In A Soldier's Story



ADolph Caesar remembers clearly his reaction the first time he read the script of A SOLDIER'S PLAY, the stage version of Charles Fuller's Pulitzer Prize-winning drama. "It gripped me immediately," he says of the story whose reception has won him his biggest role in his 30-year career. "I knew it was something powerful. It also had the same effect on the other actors. After our first reading in rehearsal we all knew we were involved with a great play, one that was beyond the ordinary. I've now played Sgt. Waters on stage over 600 times and it never fails to amaze me how much spirit and enthusiasm is generated by the play. It really is a case where the play is the thing."

The film version of the play is proving to be the thing" also. Early indications are that it will do very well for a "serious" film, especially a serious Black film.

Caesar, who has been mentioned as a possible Academy Award nominee for his riveting portrayal of Sgt Waters, credits this success to the fact that A SOLDIER'S STORY, WHICH THE FILM IS CALLED, DEALS WITH "the realities of the human condition, including racism, national pride, frustration, dedication, ambition.

Come To Church Services

ST. MATTHEW 5: 13

And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him:

And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are they that mourn: For they shall be comforted.

Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

Blesses are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

Blessed are the peace-makers: for they shall be called the children of God.

Blessed are they which are persecuted for right-eousness' sake: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men.

Help "Free" Free Blacks.

We had another example recently of two kinds of Blacks. Whoopi Goldberg, the rather bizarre Negro comedienne of a Broadway show (someone said White Folks can really pick them), wanted the world to know that she wanted to go to South Africa to entertain. She drew a line in the sand and told those who protested her going to cross it. She challenged them to examine themselves physically if they did not like her choice.

The other kind of Afro-American is a group of Afro-Americans who have character, led by Randall Robinson who has escalated his fight against apartheid in South Africa. Robinson recently formed the "Free South Africa Movement," a direct action arm of TransAfrica, his lobbying group on African and Carribbean issues.

On Thanksgiving eve, joined by D.C.'s delegate to Congress, Walter Fauntroy, and Mary Berry, U.S. Civil Rights Commissioner, Robinson was arrested for occupying the South African embassy. "Ours was an act of conscience in response to the repressive action of the South African government with respect to the noble, non-violent protests of black South Afrians over the last few months," Fauntroy said.

Robinson, calling South Africa "the world's most vicious government," said the sit-in would revive the cause against this arrogant genocide.

this was the first of a series of non-violent protests on a daily basis by Black by Black leadership from across the country, Robinson promised. Sure enough, U.S. Rep. Charles Hayes (D. Ill.) and Rev. Joseph Lowery, head of SCLC, led a demonstration the following Monday and were arrested for illegal entry at the embassy of repression.

At issue are Black strike leaders imprisioned without charge or trial in South Africa. The horrifying toll of 167 killed in South Africa during past two weeks alone, plus the additional thousands who have lost their lives, been maimed, imprisoned, or otherwise traumatized in the aftermath of South Africa's infamous "constitutional reforms" also cry out for strong condemnatory measures by the U.S.

"Free" sees the Reagan policy of "constructive engagement" (how can you" contructively" by involved with evil?) as a disguise for acomodation of apartheid. "This policy supposedly absolves the U.S. of any responsibility to condemn White-on-Black brutality in South Africa," Robinson said.

In addition to "Free," there is more good news: bad news for Pretoria. Internal backlash against South Africa's genocide is rising among the White population there. Since February, 165 (mostly Blacks) have died in protests and more than 1,000 Blacks jailed in indiscriminate gestapo actions. The White moderates, although small in number, can no longer be counted on by the government.

Moderate Whites in America will also be attracted to Robinson's movement because it is moral and just. If Regan does not move quickly to diffuse it by applying pressure on Botha's government, he may have a domestic problem on his hands--the likes of the 60s. Bad news, remember, travels fast.

It seems, however, that good news does not travel fast. Few know that in a short period, TransAfrica has become the American conscience on African affairs.

"We don't have the resourses to carry out a massive direct mail campaign as do our rivals on the right. We don't have wealthy philanthropists endowing us with millions. You are our resource!" Robinson tells Black people.

To Be Equal

New Responsibilities For Private Sector

The prospect of another four years of an administration that fervently believes in voluntarism and private initiatives, rather than government action, to correct the social inequities in our society places a new responsibility on the private sector.

In a way, it is similar to the situation that existed after the first Reagan electoral victory in 1980. Many in the business community welcomed government's retreat from solving social problems. But the deep recession dampened business' enthusiasm. And the enormity of the problems led many to wait and see whether market forces could solve social problems, as many believed they could.

After a vigorous economic recovery that left blacks in place-- at the bottom -- we not know for sure that market forces alone won't do the job. So the ball is back in the private sector's court. What will it do with it? I am hopeful that an enlightened private sector will rise to its new responsibilities, in part because playing a wider, more positive social role is in business' own interest. Many businessmen understand that improved public services and wider opportunities are essential to the survival of their companies and the free enterprise system.

For example, we see real concern about the deterioration of a public education system that does not adequately prepare young people for productive roles in a high-tech economy. Some companies have responded by "adopt-a-school" programs, loaned executives and equipment, and lobbying for more public support for the schools. Others have set up training centers in low-income neighborhoods in association with community-based organizations such as the Urban League, to train prople for better jobs.

Such efforts need to be widened. The private sector should actively enter into a partnership with the voluntary sector to deal with the social problems that undermine social stability and business' long term interests. That partnership should be based on business doing some things directly, while others are performed by voluntary agencies with expanded business support. Among the things business can do directly are job creation, training and affirmative action. The private sector needs to become far more creative in expanding job opportunities at all skills levels.

It is questionable whether its reliance on capital expenditures yields more productivity than similar expenditures in training and employing the young people and minorities who have such high unemployment rates. The fascination with technology has sometimes led companies to spend a lot on equipment that does the job more expensively and less efficiently than trained workers could.

The private sector also has to ignore the signals against afirmative action coming out of Washington. The best companies today are committed to using the talents of all people and continue to recruit, train and promote blacks and minorities. That makes good business sense, and even if equal employment opportunity laws are lukewarly enforced, employers are still open to lawsuits if they discriminate.

Private sector investment in better job, health, housing and education opportunities will yield future returns in the form of better workers, suppliers, and customers, and a stronger society that works for all its people.

Direct investments and indirect investments through partnership programs and support of community based institutions can make a big difference in the years ahead.

No one should be under any illusions that a private-voluntary sector partnership can replace government action, but it can go a long way toward relieving human suffering and helping many people into the mainstream of our society.

Public Support Needed For Famed Convict.

For the Advancement for Colored People in Louisiana is mobilizing public support for famed convict - journalist Wilbert Rideau, who is once again asking the Louisiana Board of Pardons to grant him clemency by commuting his prison sentence.

Rideau is serving a life sentence for the 1961 murder of a white Lake Charles Bank teller during a holdup. A commutation would mean that his sentence would be reduced to a penalty lesser than life, which would make him eligible for release at some point in the future.

The 42-year-old black convict has been imprisoned at the Louisiana State Penitentiary for the past 23 and ½ years. He is co-editor of THE ANGOLITE, the prison news magazine, and has won some of the most prestigious press and journalism awards in the nation, never before given a prisoner, for his penetrating stories about prison life.

The action by the NAACP follows an annoucement in Lake Charles by the local district attorney that he will oppose any reduction of Rideau's sentence and a campaign by whites to elicit letters to the Board of Pardons opposing his clemency application. "Rideau is the only prisoner they do this to," Ruper Richardson, NAACP State President, points out. "Convicted past 24 years and they haven't opposed them. There have been crimes committed by whites equal to Rideau's, some even worse, and they haven't been vilified and punished like Rideau has. They say it isn't racial, but to a large extent is is."

Louisiana Governor Edwin Edwards admitted as much to the NEW YORK TIMES several years ago. "Rideau was a black who had killed a white person, "he told the paper. "There has never been a case where a black had killed a black where there was this kind of furor over it when the criminal come up for clemency. It's easy to raise community feelings over Rideau."

Rideau's last clemency application, five years ago, was denied by a 3-2 vote, despite appeals from state and national denial come shortly after Rideau had become the first prisoner in history to be honored by the American Bar Association "for outstanding contribution to public understanding of the American system of law and justice."

In the years following his last denial, Rideau has gone on to win more unprecedented national honors and has continued to work for meaningful changes in the criminal justice system. Today, he enjoys a national reputation as a journalist and criminal justice expert. He has traveled throughout the state to give speeches and lecture at colleges and universities and has appeared on national television on a number of occasions. This past summer, Rideau and his co-editor participated in an unprecedented nationally televised discussion with Chief Justice Warren Burger of the United States Supreme Court.

The NAACP charges that past decisions that past decisions on Rideau's fate have been dictated by racial politics rather than by merit and fairnes. "It'll continue to be that way," Richardson states, "unless we, the public make the system understand that we demand that justice by equal and fair to all. It's wrong to single out one individual to punish more than others. The justice system is never supposed to allow itself to be used as a tool by any person or group to play politics or conduct personal vendettas with. When that can happen, then nobody is safe, especially blacks."

The NAACP is asking concerned citizens to help make a difference in the Rideau case. Since public opinion is considered by the Board of Pardons and the Governor, the NAACP URGES CITIZENS TO TAKE A FEW MINUTES TO WRITE A BRIEF LETTER REQUESTING Wilbert Rideau's relase from prison. Address all letters to: BOARD OF PARDONS, P.O. BOX 44142; Baton Rouge, LA. 70804-4142.

Public Hearing On Neon Artwork.

The Tacoma City Council will hold a public hearing on Thursday, December 6,1984, at 7:00 P.m., in the Tacoma Dome Arena. The purpose of the public hearing is to obtain additional public opinion regarding the disposition of Stephen Antonakos's artwork, "Neons for the Tacoma Dome."

City of Tacoma residents over the age of 18 will have an opportunity to express their views through public testimony and through completion of a public opinion ballot.

Your Weekly Spinal Column.
By Doctor Gordon Rody.

Wealth Is Good Health

Kids may not be able to scrape up enough pocket money to buy a "coke", but what they do have, money can't buy: boundless energy and glowing good health.

Good health is not gained by accident, nor is it conserved by neglect. . .it's harder to save than money, but pays dividends that can't be counted.

That's why it is so wise to invest your time in regular chiropractic visits for your children (and yourself). Your chiropractor can help your body maintain its proper functions. The result is continued good health. When imbalances do occur, he can locate and correct the cause, rather than the symptom, by his knowledge of the nerve system and its relation to the organs and tissue of the body through the spinal column.

Wealth without health creates a dismal outlook on life. You can retain your enthusiasm for each waking moment by the proper care of your body.

Your chiropractor's main concern is continued good health for you and your family.

BEWARE OF UNFIT DOCTORS

By Senator Don Nickles (R-OK)

It is entirely possible that hundreds of aged, infirm and disadvantaged Americans enrolled in the nation's federally sponsored health financing programs are being treated by unfit doctors.

During the last three years, more than 2,000 doctors nationwide have had their license suspended or revoked by their state medical boards. A doctor only loses his license after the state proves he is a threat to others' health and safety. Yet, some of these doctors continue to practice: they simply pack their bags and move to another state.

Take the California surgeon who lost his license in that state for performing numerous "extensive and dangerous" back surgeries on patients. One woman died. Later, he was found practicing on Medicare and Medicaid patients in Michigan. It took the Michigan medical board six years to go through the administrative and legal procedures to revoke his license in their state. Then this enterprising doctor set up practice in New York State. That state's board has yet to revoke this doctor's license and he is probably still practicing there and still getting reimbursed by the federal government for his Medicare and Medicaid patients.

A doctor may hold valid licenses in more than one state. So, a doctor who has an Oklahoma license can legally treat patients even if he has been barred from practicing in the other 49 states!

State boards do exchange some information on incompetent doctors, but the exchange network is voluntary and incomplete. Even if a state board has been made aware that a doctor has been sanctioned in the past, it may be legally prevented from acting on that information. Regardless, it takes an average of three years for a state to amass enough evidence before it can move to take away a doctor's license. In the meantime, he is free to practice and the federal government must repay him for his federally sponsored patients.

Licensing and revoking medical licenses is strictly a state matter, but the protection of Medicare and Medicaid patients is a federal responsibility. Right now, federal authorities are only able to bar a doctor from participating in Medicare and Medicaid in the state which revoked his license. I am supporting a bill in the Senate that gives the government authority to protect Medicare and Medicaid patients from doctors deemed incompetent. These doctors would be prevented from continued participation in Medicare and Medicaid in all states.

51 million Americans depend on Medicare and Medicaid to help them finance their medical needs. They certainly deserve better protection than is now guaranteed them.
